In an exclusive interview, we sat down with Elaine Macdonald to delve into the inspiration behind "See Rhinoceros" and her passion for wildlife conservation.

Interviewer: What ignited your passion for writing about endangered species?

Macdonald: As a child, I was deeply affected by the stories of animals facing extinction. I believe that literature has the power to inspire empathy and action, so I set out to use my writing to raise awareness about the plight of these magnificent creatures.

Interviewer: How did your research for "See Rhinoceros" inform the narrative?

Macdonald: I spent countless hours observing rhinoceroses in their natural habitat, speaking with conservationists, and studying the complex issues surrounding poaching and habitat loss. This firsthand experience allowed me to create a nuanced and authentic portrayal of the challenges faced by both the animals and the people who care for them.

Interviewer: What do you hope readers will take away from "See Rhinoceros"?

Macdonald: I hope that this book will ignite a deep appreciation for the beauty and fragility of the natural world. I also want to inspire readers to become advocates for the protection of endangered species and to recognize the importance of our interconnectedness with all living things.

"See Rhinoceros" by Elaine Macdonald is a captivating and thought-provoking novel that will resonate with readers of all ages. Its rich characters, captivating story, and stunning depiction of the African wilderness will leave you breathless and eager for more. Immerse yourself in this literary gem and discover the extraordinary beauty and poignant challenges that lie at the heart of our planet's most endangered species.
