Gather Your Materials:

- A circular hoop (made of wood, metal, or willow)
- Yarn or sinew for wrapping the hoop
- Beads, feathers, and other embellishments
- Scissors

Weaving the Web:

Wrap the yarn or sinew tightly around the hoop, creating an even and secure base for your web. Divide the hoop into equal sections and tie short pieces of yarn to each point. Using these spokes as guides, weave concentric circles of yarn, gradually creating a delicate web.

Adorning the Dream Catcher:

Let your creativity soar as you adorn your dream catcher with beads, feathers, and other embellishments. Thread beads onto the spokes or the web itself. Attach feathers to the bottom of the hoop, allowing them to flutter gently in the breeze.

The Ritual of Hanging:

Once your dream catcher is complete, find a special place to hang it. Traditionally, Native Americans placed dream catchers above their beds, suspended from the ceiling or a wall. As you hang your creation, take a moment to set your intentions. Invite positive dreams and envision the nightmares being caught within the web.
